Like many people I did not hear about the book author until I went to see the show. My little one was ecstatic to hear that there I got a tickets to a cat show and she thought it will be a "cat show".. and when I told her it is going to be actual acting and real theater she went gaga. I saw few cat performances and so did she before seeing Popovich's act. We have been to many cat shows that had some cat food companies organized gigs with cats, then we also caught a show at Key West with the crazy cat guy at the Sunset pier. I used to think of them as really great performances as I know how difficult is to make a cat to do anything, let alone do it in public with people cheering and all the commotions.. When I saw the Popovich show I was totally mesmerized. So many cats, and cats performing so many fantastic acting just like actors in theater, working in groups, rescuing animals from fake fire building - hilarious acting between cats and dogs, riding in the train with conductor animal.. all acrobatics and all beautifully staged production in real theater on real stage where animals were real actors..I was amazed and I knew I wanted to know what Mr. Popovich has to say about cat training. I consider any other source inferior to someone who actually can do animals and cats to do what he can do. I also understand that nobody can have better credentials to do so not only because his own lustrous achievement and daily performances but also because he comes from generations of cat trainers. He simply must know something that he is doing impossible. What I also loved is that the cats did not appear stressed, starved like those in Key West, and did not appear doing things out of fear of punishment and were NOT forced to do their acts.
